

THE HERALD.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 18, 1882.

The trial of the Ashland murderers commenced Monday.

We are getting tired of the expression, "the Ashland trial still drags its slow length along," which continues to appear in nearly every paper in the State.

Ohio county was represented in the Frankfort Convention by Messrs. W. F. Gregory, H. D. McHenry, W. T. Chapman, S. E. Hill, R. P. Hocker, E. D. Walker and Representative Jesse Williams.

The gallant Wolford was defeated, but we fear the sting will return to the bosom of the Democratic party of Kentucky, and will bring it defeat in years to come. Not the actual defeat of Wolford, but the principle that brought it is what we lament.

PROBABLY the most advertising firm in the United States is that of Messrs. A. Vogeler & Co., Baltimore, Md., proprietors of St. Jacobs Oil. Their medicine is a most excellent one, and the way they are putting it before the public insures the greatest success. We hear of cures effected by it which are almost wonderful.

ALL over the State there is a loud and growing demand that the assessment laws of the State be amended and improved. It is clear that vast sums of money are each year lost to the State revenue by inefficient listing of property. No better argument can be produced in favor of the enactment of new laws than the following extract from the Auditor's report:

"The laws for the assessment of property and the collection of revenue are lamentably deficient; but the inherent defects of the law are often greatly aggravated by the careless and negligent manner in which the duties of assessors are performed. A large amount of taxable property is never reached at all by the assessor. The description of real estate will rarely ever serve to locate and identify it. The acreage and other details are often omitted in the most haphazard way. Counties whose boundaries have been marked and well defined for half a century present the remarkable anomaly of their listing in their area from year to year, sometimes varying more than 100,000 acres. The assessor seems to have no standard of valuation to guide him in the listing of property. He values the same property differently in different years, and in different sections of the county. The small property-holders are more nearly assessed at the full value of what they own than the large holders. The little they have is under the eye of the assessor; it is all listed. When property is counted by the ten or hundred thousand dollars full list is rarely ever obtained, and the valuation is low. This is true of all kinds of property, but especially so of personal property. Horse, which are held by their owners to be worth a small fortune, and which bring to them an almost princely income, are assessed at a few hundred dollars. Improved real estate, whose lineage is as clearly defined as that of a royal house—which are stabled and groomed with great care and expense—stand upon the assessor's books as being worth but a trifle more than their worthless cousins, which find a fortune in existence among pen-pens and brown-sage. This great disparity between market and assessed values is not confined to blooded stock, but characterizes all grades of animals. Manufactured articles, notes, stocks and bonds, if considered at all in an assessment, are given at a sum greatly below their actual value."

The Legislature should take hold of the matter at the present session, and the Auditor suggests that the work cannot be done in a single session, a standing committee "to look into the laws of other States and inquire into their practical workings, that we might have the benefit of the experience of those States." He also suggests "that any commission or committee to which this labor may be intrusted should comprise a high order of legal talent, and also an experienced Sheriff."

Died with the Year.

Rev. Z. Worley, a prominent Baptist minister of Crittenden county, Ky., died December 31, 1881. He was the author of several valuable religious tracts.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The January number is one of remarkable excellence and abounds with literary and artistic brilliancy. Prominent among the latter is the colored frontispiece, "The Flashing Tongs," by Meyer Von Bremen. Donnie Campbell contributes a highly interesting article, "The Past, Present and Future of New York's Water Supply," which is profusely illustrated. "Distinguished Invalids," "In the Land of the Pygmies," "Whatworth," by N. Robinson, "Hearings," by T. Jeffrey Parker, are a few of the finely-illustrated, noteworthy articles. Gerald Carlton's serial, "Leucie, Empress of the Air," is continued; and among the admirable short stories are "The 320 Up," "A Jeune; or, Actress and Woman," "Sister Marguerite," "Salute to Christmas Gifts," and "The Murder in the Rue St. Denis," both by Helen W. Pierson, etc., etc. There are several poems of merit, an unpublished one by Sir Walter Scott is invested with peculiar interest. There are also descriptive and personal sketches, paragraphs on a variety of subjects, entertaining, interesting, and affording valuable information. The number contains 128 quarto pages and about 100 illustrations, and is offered at the low price of 25 cents. The annual subscription is $2.50, sent post-free. Address Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The Appellate Convention.

The State Appellate Convention held at Frankfort Wednesday and Thursday of last week for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, conferred that honor on Thomas J. Henry, of Morgan county. He was one of Morgan's famous command during the war, and has since lived in the county from which he hailed at the convention. He is described by his friends as "a warm-hearted, generous man—honest, truthful, of a genial, pleasant bearing, and possessed of a bright, quick intellect." These words which describe all the noble qualities a man can possess, mean but little when applied to a successful candidate or a dead man and we should not be surprised if they are about as vain in this case as they are flattering to the man upon whom they are bestowed. He that it may, we were disappointed in the result of the convention, and are satisfied that the Democracy of the State made a mistake when Henry was nominated that it will be literally for years to come, as long as it has an existence. We hope it will. The course of the party in the State ever since the war has been such that it deserves something in the way of a lesson, and the sooner it gets it the better it will be. In convention of errors it is enough to know that a man once was the gray, and he is carried through, to the exclusion of the, perhaps, far more worthy Union Democrat, who was so unfortunate as not to have enlisted under the stars and bars.

While Southern principles are a part of our nature, and while we have the greatest admiration for those who survived the conflict, as well as for those who fought, died and died for their homes and for their country, we are conscious that the war is over and have a sense of political justice that warns us to drop war issues and march on in peace to an easy victory over our enemies.

U. S. Service Reform.

One principle that lies at the very root of every Republican government, and one which seems to have been forgotten in this country for many years past, particularly since the advent to power of the Republican party, a principle on which the whole executive system of a country and especially of this country should be placed, is that public patronage is public property, and that the "use of it or any part of it for the benefit of a party, a faction or an individual" is an offense of the same nature, and equally as reprehensible as the conversion to such uses of any other species of public property. If public patronage is public property, then every officeholder but holds his place on public trust, and if he uses it for any other than the public interest and the earning of his own wages he should be immediately removed and punished, as would any other trustee of public property for the prostitution of his charge to base personal, factional, sectional or political uses. The office should be the servant and not the master of the people, and should be held amenable to them for any abuse against their dignity or their property.

For a very long period after the formation of our government it is a well known fact that appointments were made solely with reference to the public good and the qualifications and character of the appointees. During that long period we have no recorded instance of official impropriety, or what is at this day dubbed "cronkiness." Everything went well and all work was done in the best manner, for the employee well knew that his tenure of office depended solely on his ability and fidelity. Finally the idea of rewards for signal political service crept in, by degrees at first, but finally the leak became too great and the whole system was overturned, and "to the victors belong the spoils" became an axiom in the political economy of all parties and the sole guide in the conduct of national affairs. To this, the most pernicious doctrine of modern politics, is directly traceable nearly the whole of the prodigious mass of impurity and corruption which is to be seen in almost every department, from the Treasury with John Sherman as its recent head to the very lowest Federal office in the land. Everywhere the golden of corruption rears its tail head above the surface of the official waters, now green with the poisonous algae of what in private life would be a crime, and which in reality is in public life none the less so, save that the perpetrator is inaccessible on record of the protection thrown around him by his principal, who holds his place by virtue of the original act of the senate.

We see the results of the system in the administration of offices everywhere. Boward for political services sent Harlan and Kilpatrick to San America, and their imbecile deeds are now about to precipitate us into a war with Chili or Peru. We see the evil in the efforts to remove Gen. Eli Murray from the Governorship of Utah; we see it in the bribery, falsehood, slander and chicanery which we meet on every hand and in every part of the country. Let a man become first with the desire for office and there is no maning the depths to which he will descend to accomplish an object. He will stultify himself and ruin his best friend—anything in the catalogue of meanness or dishonesty, if he can but get the office to which he aspires. Ask of an outraged nation what removed the Chief Executive, of whom as a man she was proud. Her unanswerable will be insane and insatiable desire for office such as afflicts many who are yet within prison walls, but who would descend to depths almost as great as did the intolerant assassin, who, like the dog he was, basely and inhumanly murdered the President of the United States. The disease is sore, but it cannot prove a sickness unto death. It carries its remedy with it, in that it will become so odious that the people will arise, and with the dat of their united voice, which even the most daring politician could not resist and crush the monstrous parasite out of existence and free themselves from the fungus that sits like a dead of death on the gates of a city teeming with every individual that is lusty enough to be seen upon the streets.

Editorial:

An action is now on foot to remove the liquor traffic from Buford. This is among the most stirring business bargains of this part of the country and to check this impending evil would certainly add brightness to the otherwise latent sunshine of her future prosperity. A move in the right direction.

shake off the baneful evil, seek out the offender's dissonant, and on his journey toward duty. Mr. G. V. Hoover, second son of James C. Hoover, of this neighborhood, who sustained injuries to the dog bones of a falling wheel some months ago, died on Sunday morning from the effects, and was interred near the farm church on the day following. He was moral and upright young man about twenty years of age, devoted to the will of his parents, and bore the agonies of his suffering with that noble fortitude illustrative of the realization of the sweetest hopes of a brighter beyond.

Miss Fannie Robertson, of near South Lexington, has just closed a three months term of school in this district. She is a bright and capable young lady, and after a brief visit to relatives in Buford and vicinity, will return to her home. Miss Fannie has a fine knowledge of English and Latin, and is a most capable and capable young lady.

Mr. A. P. Kinkaid and family, of Buford, have recently moved to Tennessee, possibly to make it their future home. Whose mind pulled down the lightning bolt? Oh, where is the man who has been so long in Tennessee, possibly to make it their future home.

An Extraordinary Location for a Physician at Buford, Ohio County, Ky. I have a house and lot, a doctor's office and a practice amounting from $2,000 to $3,000 a year, which I am offering for sale at very reasonable rates. For further particulars address N. J. Rains, M. D., Buford, Ky.

The new year has not thus far brought with it enough changes about this place to cause me to write an interesting letter. I would write you every week about the weather, tell you how many hours' rain and snow fall, how deep the mud is, and so on, but you would care to read it?

I am glad you have secured the services of "You Know," and rest satisfied that he will write up all the important news for your columns. If Jim Kirk had gone where the war line (which he would have had to read) I had no more to say than that.

Mr. Frank Turpin and wife have returned here, probably to remain a long time. Frank is agent in place of Mr. Adams, who is at Madisonville, Ky. The citizens here were grieved Saturday morning to hear of the death of Mr. Shelly Baker, who died of pneumonia, at his residence near town. Mr. Baker was a clever gentleman, an honest, upright citizen, and will be greatly missed here.

Mr. Mattie Murrell is recovering from the effects of the influenza. Mrs. W. H. Blankenship has been quite ill for some time. There is considerable sickness in and near town. The citizens of Buford, Ky., are in town Sunday.

W. T. Austin has sold his interest in the firm of W. T. & F. D. Austin to F. O. Austin. John P. Cooper is in feeble health. Persons who get their HERALDS at this office had better call on the agent and pay up, or he will call on them.

Tom Stevens is going to build a new livery stable, and maybe a new hotel. Misses Reed and Stevens and T. Stevens, of Hartford College, were in town Sunday, the guests of Mrs. Tom Stevens.

ANOTHER LETTER.

Some of the Hartford College boys and girls spent Sunday in our little village. Come again friends, we shall be glad to see you.

Mr. Shelly Baker, one of our best citizens, died Saturday morning of pneumonia of the heart, after an illness of about one week. The C. O. & S. W. railroad is doing a booming business for the coal mines, as it is putting on a number of trains, and has raised a large number of early chickens. Frank Turpin, who has been agent and operator is back with us to-day.

January 17, 1882. The streets are the worst I ever saw. It. F. Kirby has returned from Evansville, where he has been on business for several days. Harry Jackson left for Evansville yesterday with his second lot of fat cattle. Mrs. Strand left for Evansville yesterday with a raft of logs. Mr. John Cook, late of this place, now of Ohio Lake, was in our town last week.

Miss Laura Heaton, of Owensboro, who has been here visiting friends and relatives for several days, has gone to visit relatives in the vicinity of Centertown. Mr. W. H. Gardner has bought the Campbell building on Main street, and is tearing it down with a view of rebuilding it. Mr. John Woodburn has returned from Evansville, where he has been with a raft of logs.

Died, at the residence of her husband, Tuesday, January 10th, 1882, Mrs. Samantha Caseler. Her funeral was preached the next day at W. Providence church, where she was interred in the church burying ground.
